DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless -

- (b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.
- 2. Claims 21, 22 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Simon, U.S. Patent No. 5,937,065. Referring to claim 21, Simon discloses a keyless motor vehicle entry and ignition system wherein a user activates a remote control by selected a function for the motor vehicle to perform (Abstract & Figure 1, element 12), which meets the limitation of a remote keyless entry transmitter. When activation of a function is desired, the driver presses the appropriate remote control switch and an initial code is sent to a second transceiver (Col. 5, lines 5-19). The second transceiver sends a challenge back to the remote control that is combined with a predefined secret seed number that is stored in the EEPROM of the remote control to generate an answer number (Col. 5, lines 38-50), which meets the limitation of a key generating key in the remote keyless entry transmitter, the key generating key never transmitted from the remote keyless entry transmitter, a mechanism in the remote keyless entry transmitter for generating a working key from the key generating key and the output. The remote control has a counter to increment security numbers when performing rolling codes procedures (Col. 1, lines 47-55), which meets the limitation of an incrementable counter in the remote keyless entry transmitter having an output.

Art Unit: 2132

Referring to claim 22, Simon discloses a keyless motor vehicle entry and ignition system wherein a user activates a remote control by selected a function for the motor vehicle to perform (Abstract & Figure 1, element 12), which meets the limitation of a remote keyless entry transmitter. When activation of a function is desired, the driver presses the appropriate remote control switch and an initial code is sent to a second transceiver (Col. 5, lines 5-19). The second transceiver sends a challenge back to the remote control that is combined with a predefined secret seed number that is stored in the EEPROM of the remote control to generate an answer number (Col. 5, lines 38-50), which meets the limitation of a key generating key provided in a remote keyless entry device and never transmitted from the remote keyless entry device, a number generator configured to generate a number for use as a working key, the number based on the key generating key. The answer number is then sent to the second transceiver (Col. 5, lines 52-54), which meets the limitation of a transmitter configured to transmit the working key to a motor vehicle during a training session.

Allowable Subject Matter

- 3. Claims 1-20 are allowed.
- 4. The following is a statement of reasons for the indication of allowable subject matter:

 The prior art does not disclose or make obvious a remote keyless entry device that generates a working key from a stored key generating key and transmitted to a motor vehicle receiver.

 Subsequent commands transmitted from the keyless entry device to the motor vehicle receiver are encrypted with the working key.
- 5. The closest prior art (Hussey, U.S. Patent No. 6,130,622) discloses a remote convenience vehicle system comprising a portable transceiver and a vehicle-based transceiver wherein a current key is generated from a stored system key. Unlike the claimed system, the vehicle-based transceiver of Hussey generates the key and transmits the generated key to the portable transceiver. Subsequent commands transmitted from the portable transceiver of Hussey can be encrypted, but there is no disclosure of what key is used to encrypt the commands that are transmitted to the vehicle-based transceiver.

Conclusion

6. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.
